Revolution Loosed as Americans.

Nearly five years have gone by since the revolution in Mexico loosed on Americans in Mexico, and on Americans on our own side of the border, the forces of murder and misrule. Yet, during these five years we have taken no efficient steps to control the situation in Mexico.

The professional pacifists said, and even now say, that preparedness would have invited trouble with Mexico and trouble with Germany and perhaps with other old world powers. Look at the facts!

We nouly Anger and Contempt.

We submitted tamely to the murder of our men and the outrages of our women. We bore with spiritless submission outrages upon outrages, mill the number of our citizens killed mounted into the hundreds. Yet, so far from securing the good will of the Mexicans, this policy of unpreparedness and of tame submission to insult and injury, merely aroused both their auger and contempt to such a larguere that we are now engaged in a larguere that we are not the forces to make that we officers out the way to provide that, in the event of war, we shall have officers worth having that the forces to make that we affective. We have actually drained the coast artillery from the seaboard defence, to serve as infantry down on the Mexican border. This nation of one hundred million people with a territory as largue as all Burops and more wealth than any other ration in the world possesses has to strip its seacoast forts of their defenders and put these defenders at work which they are not trained to do. Even thus we are wholly unable to make good our complete lack of preparedness.

"If at the outset, if three years ago, we had resolutely and with foresight prepared to act, and then, if necessary, acted in Mexico, that country would today be as peaceful and prosperous as Cuba—where we actually did take the very action I advocate for Mexico.
